President's Report

Thomas J. Socha, SSCA President, Old Dominion University
SSCA Executive Council Meeting
March 23, 24, 2011, Little Rock, AR

- Lead the SSCA Administrative Committee (AC) in the development of the SSCA 2011-2015 Strategic Plan. This included choosing a meeting site; convening, leading, and grocery shopping for the special AC summer meeting in Orlando, Florida; writing four drafts of the plan, posting a draft for members' feedback, soliciting the feedback of selected SSCA members, and editing the final draft.
- Began implementing 2011-2015 Strategic Plan Initiatives:
 - Will convene and lead SSCA Mini-Financial Summit (two panels at Little Rock)
 - Will conduct an Open Forum on SSCA Feedback for convention papers (SSCA, 2011, Little Rock) and will follow up with past division chairs to write recommendations to be shared with the EC at its mid-year meeting in New Orleans (as Past President) and next year's annual SSCA convention in San Antonio
- Held a teleconference with John Meyer (Chair, SSCA Publications Committee) and John Paul Gutierrez (Editor, Social Science Journals, SAGE publications) in response to an inquiry from John Paul about forming future publishing relationships between SSCA and SAGE Publishers.
- Appointed Ken Cissna as SSCA's Representative to the NCA SPECTRA Advisory Board. The EC voted unanimously to extend to the term to three years (at the mid-year meeting in San Francisco) as President's appointments can only last one year. Should NCA decide to make this post permanent, it will advise SSCA and at that point SSCA will need to issue a call for nominations and run an election for someone to fill future appointments to this committee (and make the needed adjustments the SSCA constitution).
- Attended the NCA SPECTRA meeting (filling in for Ken Cissna) in San Francisco.
- Charged the SSCA Publications Committee with a special inquiry into the SSCA Freedom of Speech Division's publishing the online journal—The Communication Law Review. The details of this matter will be covered in the report by the Publications Committee—John Meyer, Chair.
- Worked with the ED, Carl Cates, Editor-Elect, JD Ragsdale, and Editor, Mary Stuckey, on improving the schedule of compensation for SCJ Editor as well as a schedule of Editor succession.
- And, besides the usual duties of the office (newsletter column, agenda preparation, presidential address, trouble-shooting, etc.), and in the spirit of this convention's theme, processed 583 SSCA emails (and counting) after last year's convention and I am still smiling.

Publications Committee Recommendations RE:

Second Journal and possible future publications

We, the Publications Committee of SSCA, recommend the following steps be taken:

1. Explore with Taylor and Francis increasing editorial support and compensation along with moving Southern Communication Journal to six issues per year.
2. Move to six issues per year of SCJ once SSCA and its leaders are happy with new support arrangements with T & F, presumably within the next two years.
3. At the SSCA Convention in San Antonio, hold a "Publication Roundtable" session where members of the administrative committee, the publication committee, and invited "experts" (especially former editors) along with anyone interested discuss pros, cons, and level of interest in expanding SSCA's publication options, including but not limited to
 - a. The nature of a second journal
 - b. A potential book series
 - c. Other potential SSCA publication platforms (likely online)
4. In two years, solicit proposals that SSCA publish a second journal (likely online only assuming most strengths of that format can be engaged).
 - a. Pursue the idea first with T & F but remain open for discussion with other publishers.
 - b. Issue a call for proposals for the second journal, to be evaluated by the Publications Committee and the Administrative Committee.
 - c. As part of the above call, revive the existing Qualitative Research Journal proposal updated by interested parties.

Re: SSCA Freedom of Speech Division's Publication Communication Law Review

Background

On January 24, 2011 past president of SSCA Charles Tardy contacted current president of SSCA Tom Socha regarding the positive media visibility of Communication Law Review, a publication of the SSCA Free Speech Division. This inquiry raised questions about the status of this publication, which identifies itself with SSCA.

The website of Communication Law Review (www.commlawreview.org) includes a statement that "The Communication Law Review is an online publication of the Southern States Communication Association's Freedom of Speech Division." The former SSCA logo appears at the bottom of the page.

Tom Socha raised a concern about the use of the logo and perception that the Communication Law Review is an official SSCA publication. He noted that information about Communication Law Review has not been shared in the Executive Committee meeting or in business meeting minutes of the SSCA Free Speech Division. The publications committee was charged with learning more about this publication in helping SSCA begin to develop future policies concerning how to optimally manage its publishing activities: "It is critically important that everything using an official SSCA moniker and official SSCA platform be formally vetted by SCA and then be held accountable to the association (via a regular reporting mechanism, review plan, and input into editor selection), as our association's credibility depends on it. Or the publication should not indicate an affiliation with SSCA."

On January 25, 2011 Pat Arneson (a member of the publications committee and current chair of the Free Speech Division) contacted Dave Dewberry (vice chair of the Free Speech Division and current editor of Communication Law Review) requesting formal information about the publication.

History of Communication Law Review

Dave Dewberry provided the following history of Communication Law Review and his involvement with the publication.

The Communication Law Review originated in 1983, conceived as a newsletter of the Freedom and Responsibilities of Speech Division of the Southern States Communication Association under the editorship of Stephen A. Smith. The Communication Law Review began in print and featured articles by notable statesmen and scholars such as Sen. Dale Bumpers, Sen. Daniel Moynihan, Diane Blair, Stephen A. Smith, Gregg Phifer, and Franklyn S. Haiman.

In 2005 David R. Dewberry was nominated to the editorial post of Communication Law Review by Stephen A. Smith and elected by members of the Free Speech Division in its business meeting. Dewberry has worked to make the publication available free online, maintained a record of consistent publication, and modified the publication toward the tone and style of a scholarly publication. He has volunteered his time and personally paid for all expenses associated with the publication, most notably the server space to host the Communication Law Review. The publication requires no external funding and requires no server space from any university or organization. Dewberry has continually provided updates and responded to questions related to Communication Law Review at Freedom of Speech Division convention business meetings throughout his editorship. He also routinely posts a call for papers and publication dates on the National Communication Association's Communication Research and Theory Network (CRTNET) electronic listserve.

When Communication Law Review began, the publication featured short articles that contributed to the understanding of the historical, theoretical, rhetorical, and legal aspects of freedom of expression. In its current form, Communication Law Review remains dedicated to that proposition. Recent articles have focused on legal communication, Congressional arguments, copyright concerns, communication in the practice of law, censorship issues, legislative impact in family communication, humor and the Supreme Court, jury communication, and a special issue on critical race theory.

Communication Law Review is committed to ensuring that high quality scholarship on the topic of communication law is available freely to whomever, wherever. That is, the Communication Law Review strongly recognizes that free expression scholarship should be free and accessible to all.

The online version of the Communication Law Review includes peer-reviewed scholarship with an acceptance rate of 21.85%. Articles by numerous scholars have been included, such as State Congressman Lindsley Armstrong Smith, Kent A. Ono, and Ryan A. Malphurs (whose article recently gained national attention in the New York Times, Washington Post, National Public Radio, and the American Bar Association Journal).

The Communication Law Review website has been accessed throughout the United States as well as abroad. The website has been accessed 60 times from Iran, 222 times from Russia, and 364 from China; the site is also used by scholars in Malaysia, Japan, and Oxford.

In short, the Communication Law Review is a very strong and well-recognized forum that is committed to the proposition that freedom of speech is essential to the relevance of every aspect of the communication discipline.

Query to Publications Committee

Since Dave Dewberry has begun editing Communication Law Review, the publication has become a full-fledged refereed online journal.

As SSCA President, Tom Socha charged the publications committee with examining the status of this publication to protect the association from potential legal, copyright, as well as image problems from the use of the SSCA logo.

To clarify SSCA's role in the management and editorial oversight of this publication, responses to the following questions were requested. Since information relating to this publication dates back to 1983, best knowledge to these questions were given:

Q1: Who currently holds the copyright to the contents contained in the Communication Law Review? Other than the statement—"The Communication Law Review is an online publication of the Southern States Communication Association's Freedom of Speech Division" there is no statement of ownership.

R1: The Communication Law Review is a publication that originated with Stephen A. Smith in 1983. The editor and members of the Freedom of Speech Division have made decisions regarding the publication. The publication editor (through its current editor, David Dewberry) holds copyright to the contents.

Q2. Is the journal indexed? If so where?

R2: The publication is freely available online (www.commlawreview.org) and may be access through internet search engines.

Q3. How many submissions does the journal receive per year?

R3: Anywhere from 20-40. Last year was 35 or so.

Q4. What are the journal's annual acceptance/rejection rates?

R4: 21.85% is the current acceptance rate.

Q5. Who is hosting the online journal? Who owns the server where it currently resides?

R5: It's a commercial server paid for by David Dewberry.

Q6. Is there any financial support of any kind for the journal? How are direct and indirect costs covered? (This is very important)

R: David Dewberry willingly pays for all financial support related to the publication it and has never asked for any compensation.

Q6: I noticed that the cover of the 1983 issue has a non-SSCA member subscription price (and it is free to SSCA division members). Charging a fee is the kind of thing that requires accounting and oversight especially as we are a 501c3 organization.

R6: The journal is freely available online to everyone, whether or not they are a member of SSCA.

Q7. How is the Editor chosen?

R7: Dave Dewberry was nominated by Stephen A. Smith and voted on by members of the Freedom of Speech Division in the 2005 business meeting in Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

Q8. How is the Editorial board chosen?

R8: Some were grandparented in, some volunteered, others were asked to join. All are qualified in communication law.

Q9. How many members of the current ED board are active SSCA members?

R9: The current editorial board consists of:

- David R. Dewberry, Rider University, Editor (yes)
- Tyrone Adams, University of Louisiana, Lafayette, Associate Editor (yes)
- Terry Cole, Appalachian State University, Associate Editor (yes)
- Norma Cook, University of Tennessee-Knoxville, Associate Editor (yes)
- Rebekah Fox, University of Texas at San Marcos, Associate Editor (no)
- Paul Gates, Appalachian State University, Associate Editor (no)
- Rachel Alicia Griffin, Southern Illinois University, Associate Editor (yes)
- Pat Johnson, Emerson College, Associate Editor (yes)
- Katie Langford, Texas Tech University, Associate Editor (no)
- Robert Margesson, Regis University, Associate Editor (no)
- Matthew S. May, Colgate University (no)
- Thomas McGettrick, Loyola University Chicago, Associate Editor (no)
- Richard A. Parker, Northern Arizona University, Associate Editor (no)
- Robert Richards, Associate Editor (no)
- Kate Zittlow Rogness, University of St. Thomas, Associate Editor (no)
- Omar Swartz, University of Colorado, Denver, Associate Editor (no)
- Stephen A. Smith, University of Arkansas, Associate Editor (yes)
- Jim Vickrey, Troy University Montgomery, Associate Editor (yes)

Eight of the 18 members (44%) of the editorial board are active SSCA members as of 1/30/2011.

Q10. Issue 1 of the journal appeared in 1983 followed by one in 1984. It was not published again until 2002 but since 2005 it has published two issues each year. What is the history of the journal? What happened in 2005 that changed things?

R10: The then newsletter editor was inconsistent. David Dewberry was nominated and has since got the publication going again.

Q11. What kind of agreement do contributors sign when their manuscript is accepted for publication (need a copy of this if there is one)?

R11: A standard agreement is exchanged. (Please see attachment.)

Q12. How do the officers of the Freedom of Speech Division learn about the journal's activities? (It does not appear in any of the SSCA EC minutes since 2001 and was not mentioned in the Minutes of the Division at the SSCA meeting in Savannah in 2008).

R12: Each year a handful of people show up to the Freedom of Speech Division business meeting at SSCA. The division does not elect a secretary. In 2008, the chair of the division (Pat Arneson) submitted minutes and inquired about the need for a secretary. She learned that it was acceptable for the division to not elect a secretary to record/submit minutes, which was the practice in some other divisions. In short, the divisions routine agenda is pretty standard. We discuss submissions to the conference, elect a vice-chair, and encourage people to submit for the next year. We also have a call for nominations and a 4-person committee to select the top publication on First Amendment issues by a member of SSCA during the previous calendar year (the James Madison Prize). Updates about Communication Law Review have been provided every year Dave Dewberry has been able to attend SSCA since 2005. He was unable to attend in 2008 because he was defending his dissertation.

Q13. Do the officers of the Freedom of Speech Division monitor the journal's quality and it activities? If so, how? If not, why not?

R13: The editor is a member and current officer (vice-chair) in the division. Several members of the division are members of the editorial board. Members of the division provide support in the form of submissions, which may also be made by non-members of SSCA.

Q14. Do any formal written agreements exist between the Communication Law Review and SSCA?

R14: Unsure.

Q15. At what point did the journal officially become an official part of the SSCA Freedom of Speech Division?

R15: When the publication was founded in 1983.

Q16. What is (was) the constitutional authority (SSCA) the division relied on that supports a division publishing, or endorsing, a journal for publication?

R16: The publication began as a division newsletter. Unsure.

Q17: At any point has SSCA provided any kind of support (direct and indirect) for the journal?
R17: No support, either direct or indirect, has been asked for at any point. None has been offered.

Q18. As SSCA currently does not have By Laws on record for the Freedom of Speech Division, is the journal included in its By Laws? If so, how?

R18: The current division chair (Pat Arneson) was unaware that our division doesn't have by-laws on file. She checked with several members of the division to try to locate a copy but none was available. A set of by-laws will be drafted and proposed at the 2011 business meeting in Little Rock, Arkansas. Since these are being drafted, we are unable to state whether Communication Law Review will be included in them.

Q19. Why has the Freedom of Speech Division not communicated with the SSCA Executive Council about its journal? There is no record of the journal in the EC minutes since 2001, nor is the journal mentioned in the in the only minutes the division has posted with SSCA in the past 10 years (i.e., the Freedom of Speech Division Meeting held in Savannah, 2008).

R19: Since the publication was begun by Stephen A. Smith in 1983, Freedom of Speech Division has historically held that Communication Law Review is a newsletter of the division. The publication was underway when the current editor and current chair of the division joined SSCA. The publication has since been transformed and attained a status similar to an online journal.

Recommendations:

(1) From Communication Law Review

Following conversation with Stephen A. Smith, David R. Dewberry proposed to remove the SSCA logo and identification with the Freedom of Speech Division of SSCA and potentially remain unaffiliated or seek affiliation with another organization (e.g., American Communication Association).

(2) From SSCA President (Tom Socha)

- If there is interest and willingness, we might be able to redefine/reconstitute it into an SSCA publication (which means it has to follow policies and procedures like SCJ, and maybe T&F or Sage might want also in somehow)
- we could officially endorse it as an SSCA divisional journal and then develop policies about its reporting and accounting to SSCA at large
- if the division no longer wanted to support it, SSCA could also officially endorse it as an SSCA affiliate publication (we'd have to work out the details of what this would mean), and make the relationship a distant one.

(3) From Freedom of Speech Division Chair (Pat Arneson)

As chair of the Freedom of Speech Division, I would be disheartened if Communication Law Review, which began as a publication in the division, were to disaffiliate from the division or SSCA. I would like to see some arrangement whereby the publication could continue, as both a commitment to and reflection of freedom of expression.

(4) From the Publications Committee

The publication committee proposes that Communication Law Review continue as a publication of the Freedom of Speech Division. An annual report should be submitted to the publication committee chair in advance of the annual convention. This report will become part of the larger publication committee report given to the executive committee at the annual convention. The publications committee and executive committee will use the report to determine in the future if any changes need to be made to this arrangement.

II. SITE VISIT SUMMARY:

On February 24-25, 2011, Executive Director Carl Cates, Time and Place Chair Debbie Phillips and ConferenceDirect Global Account Executive Janet Fisher Performed the hotel site visit in Tampa. Three properties were scheduled as Part of the site visit: Hyatt Regency Tampa, Tampa Marriott Waterside and Hilton St. Petersburg Bayfront. On Feb. 24 the group viewed the hotel accommodations and conference meeting spaces at the Hyatt Regency Tampa. The group also had lunch at the Avanzare Restaurant. The group then received a tour of the surrounding areas including Ybor City and Channelside. The Hyatt Regency Tampa also provided hotel rooms for Carl Cates and Debbie Phillips for the night. On the morning of Feb. 25, the group arrived at the second property at Tampa Marriott for a tour of the hotel property and conference meeting spaces. The group also were treated to breakfast at the Café Waterside restaurant. After touring the facilities at the Tampa Marriott Waterside, Janet drove us to the St. Petersburg area for a tour of the Hilton St. Petersburg hotel and conference meeting spaces. We also had lunch at the Hilton's restaurant. Finally we were shown around the Bay Street area and Dali Museum in St. Petersburg.

III) SITE RATING SUMMARY:

The SSCA group then rated the properties based on around twenty four criteria including meeting space layout, room rates, customer service, dining options, parking costs, upkeep of the property, location and etc. Our site scores for the properties were as follows: (The higher the score the better)

Marriott Waterside: 126, 142, 126 Total: 396

Hyatt Regency Tampa: 134, 133, 123 Total: 390

Hilton St. Petersburg: 70, 120, 70 Total: 260

IV) OVERALL RECOMMENDATION FROM THE SSCA TIME AND PLACE COMMITTEE:

Based on the Feb 2011 site visit to the properties and Tampa, the rating scores for each property and discussion of the properties the Time and Place Committee would like to recommend the Marriott Waterside as the selected hotel site for the April 8-12, 2015 SSCA conference meeting to be held in Tampa, FL. Although the top two hotels were very close (Marriott Waterside and Hyatt Regency Tampa) a few factors came out in favor of the Marriott Waterside. The Marriott Waterside was extremely close to the trolley stop making travel to Channelside or Ybor City much easier for guests than the location of the Hyatt Regency Tampa. Also the location of the Marriott Waterside was walking distance for guests who wanted dining options outside the hotel compared to the Hyatt Regency. The guest room rates and other commodities appeared to be equal. Finally the formal and informal meeting spaces areas appeared to be larger and more if a fit for SSCA members at the Marriott instead of the Hyatt. Therefore the Time and Place Committee recommends the Marriott Waterside for the April 8-12, 2015 Tampa location for SSCA.

Respectfully,

Deborah K. Phillips

Time and Place Committee, Chair
