

Lecturer

Department of Communication
Rollins College
Winter Park, FL

The Department of Communication at Rollins College, an ACS accredited, highly selective, nationally recognized comprehensive liberal arts college, invites applicants for a lecturer, a non-tenure track position beginning August 2012. We seek an energetic colleague for our communication department who hold a Ph.D. (ABD considered) in communication with the ability to teach courses in two of the following three areas: core courses in the major, health communication, or public relations. Teaching load will normally comprise eight courses (4/4) annually with the possibility of summer teaching, if desired.

The Department of Communication offers a new major in Communication Studies at Rollins College beginning in the fall of 2012 and a newly revised major in the Hamilton Holt School, the evening program for non-traditional students. For additional information, please visit the College website at www.rollins.edu and the Department of Communication's website at www.rollins.edu/communication.

Interested applicants must apply through the College's applicant web portal at <http://www.rollinsjobs.com> and upload the following materials: 1) a cover letter including a statement of your teaching philosophy, 2) curriculum vita and transcripts, and 3) list of references with phone and e-mail contact information. Questions and recommendations may be directed to Dr. Greg Gardner, chair of the search committee, at ggardner@rollins.edu. Review of applications will begin January 20th and continue until the position is filled.

Rollins College, one of the oldest institutions of higher learning in Florida, is a comprehensive liberal arts college located on a beautiful lakeside campus in Winter Park, FL, a metropolitan Orlando community. The College emphasizes innovative and quality teaching in small classes and is ranked number one among Southern master's level universities in the annual rankings of "America's Best Colleges," released by U.S. News & World Report.

Through its mission, Rollins College is committed to creating a fully inclusive, just community that embraces multiculturalism; persons of color and other historically under-represented groups are therefore encouraged to apply. The College's equal opportunity policy is inclusive of sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, and Rollins offers domestic partner benefits.
